His research and teaching traverse the fields of digital technology, soundscape, and the kinetic arts. Title: STATECHANGE Abstract: Architecture has typically resisted kinetics, yet there is a poetics of movement emerging at the periphery. What precedent might inform theory and practice? What actually is being designed, when the outcome is in constant flux? These questions are explored initially through the legacy of Italian Futurism and other points where movement was to the forefront of design thinking. From outside architecture, projects and discourse from the kinetic arts spark the positioning of state change as a way of conceiving an infinite range of kinetic form.
